My girlfriend really likes Robinson Crusoe, 20,000 Leagues Under the Seas and other adventure books like that. It seemed to me that SF would be a good place to find similar things and also a good way to get her more into the genre. Any suggestions? The only one I could think of was Tunnel in the Sky by Heinlein.

ROBINSON CRUSOE: Amazon.ca: Books

First off, this book just starts on the very first page which was a little strange, but not really a problem. Next, it has no page numbers; I can deal with that as well - after all the book was inexpensive. But then the reason I really hate this version on the book, is that it ends mid-sentence in the middle of chapter ten. Which means this book is good for nothing except the trash.
