Schwartz, PhD DR. SCHWARTZ: Thank you very much. From our point of view, screening is the pot of gold at the end of the rainbow. If we can find tests that will help in the early detection of cancer, we can fulfill our intuitive feelings that early detection leads to early treatment, which in turn leads to cure. Certainly we know that early treatment of

On the Back Cover. This book is meant for adoption in first courses on epidemiology in Medical Schools and Faculties of Public Health in developing and transition countries and in workshops in these countries, taught for example by members of international organizations.

Identifiability, exchangeability and confounding revisited

In 1986 the International Journal of Epidemiology published "Identifiability, Exchangeability and Epidemiological Confounding". We review the article from the perspective of a quarter century after it was first drafted and relate it to subsequent developments on confounding, ignorability, and collapsibility.
