sentence construction - in presence of vs in the presence ...

Although Google Ngram Viewer shows that both "in presence of" and "in the presence of" can be found in texts, the use of the latter is noticeably more frequent. I think that the article (or a pronoun) with "presence" would be, so to speak, more correct, and the reason for that is that the word "presence" very rarely, if not ever, goes without mentioning the person being present.
